A huntsman passing by the house heard the noise, came in and cut open the wolf's belly. Poor girl and her grandma jumped out. The wolf died.

He wore grandma's clothes and slipped into her bed. When Little Red Riding Hood arrived she found the door open.

She left home, entered the woods. Then she met a wolf on her way. The wolf asked her and learned where her grandmother lived.

Little Red Riding Hood's mother told her to take a basket filled with bread, butter, cake and berries to her sick grandmother.

She went in and went to the bedroom, but her grandma looked strange. She asked some questions about her strange appearance.

The wolf told the little girl that it was a good idea to pick some flowers for her grandmother. She agreed and started picking them.

After some questions the wolf jumped off the bed and ate her whole. Then he went back into the Grandman's bed and fell asleep snoring loudly.

The wolf rushed straight to the grandma's house and entered the house disguising his voice. Then he ate the grandma whole.
