

THE EMPEROR'S NEW CLOTHES

Read the texts in the boxes and number them from 1 to 8 to sequence the fairy tale

All his men said the clothes looked fantastic on him and the procession started. Everyone on the streets were cheering and admiring the Emperor's new clothes, when a little child said that the Emperor had no clothes on him. One by one everyone started saying the same thing as the little child, but the Emperor went on walking proudly.

He had to lie to his majesty, because he was considered the wisest man in the kingdom after the Emperor. The Emperor waited for a few more days and sent another honest man to check upon the weavers work. The man visited the weavers and the same thing happened to him. Afraid to be seen as stupid he also had to lie to his Emperor.

They also added that the clothes were so fine that, they were only visible to the most refined eye and invisible to those who are stupid. The emperor was excited to see the new cloth, paid the two swindlers a large amount to set up two looms, then the tricksters asked for the finest gold and silk thread to be delivered immediately.

The honest minister went to the weavers and was shocked to see the looms were empty. As he was afraid to be shown stupid he said that the cloth was excellent. The two swindlers said that they worked day and night and they needed more silk and gold thread, which they would again steal. The minister had to agree and went back to the palace.

Not so long ago there was an Emperor who liked new clothes so much that he spent too much of his money on them. He always wanted to be elegantly dressed. He could change his gown ten times a day. One day two swindlers entered the glorious city and told everyone that they knew how to make the most elegant cloth in the world.

Afraid to confess the truth, the Emperor started admiring the clothes. Then all his men agreed and they advised their Emperor to wear them on the day of the procession. The day came and the swindlers announced that the clothes were ready. Hearing the news the Emperor arrived and the two swindlers helped him put on his clothes.

The gold and silver went straight into the swindlers's pockets and they pretended to work hard at the empty looms until late at night. The emperor sent his first minister to check because he wanted to learn if he would be able to see the fabrics. The citizens were also curious whether the first minister was stupid or not.

The whole town was talking about this splendid cloth and the Emperor wanted to see the cloth himself. Joined by a group of trusted men, he set out to see the two swindlers. When he arrived, the two swindlers were working on the empty looms. His men said they could see the elegant cloth, but he couldn't. He thought he was a fool himself.

THE EMPEROR'S NEW CLOTHES

Read the texts in the boxes and number them from 1 to 8 to sequence the fairy tale

8

All his men said the clothes looked fantastic on him and the procession started. Everyone on the streets were cheering and admiring the Emperor's new clothes, when a little child said that the Emperor had no clothes on him. One by one everyone started saying the same thing as the little child, but the Emperor went on walking proudly.

5

He had to lie to his majesty, because he was considered the wisest man in the kingdom after the Emperor. The Emperor waited for a few more days and sent another honest man to check upon the weavers work. The man visited the weavers and the same thing happened to him. Afraid to be seen as stupid he also had to lie to his Emperor.

2

They also added that the clothes were so fine that, they were only visible to the most refined eye and invisible to those who are stupid. The emperor was excited to see the new cloth, paid the two swindlers a large amount to set up two looms, then the tricksters asked for the finest gold and silk thread to be delivered immediately.

4

The honest minister went to the weavers and was shocked to see the looms were empty. As he was afraid to be shown stupid he said that the cloth was excellent. The two swindlers said that they worked day and night and they needed more silk and gold thread, which they would again steal. The minister had to agree and went back to the palace.

1

Not so long ago there was an Emperor who liked new clothes so much that he spent too much of his money on them. He always wanted to be elegantly dressed. He could change his gown ten times a day. One day two swindlers entered the glorious city and told everyone that they knew how to make the most elegant cloth in the world.

ANSWER KEY

7

Afraid to confess the truth, the Emperor started admiring the clothes. Then all his men agreed and they advised their Emperor to wear them on the day of the procession. The day came and the swindlers announced that the clothes were ready. Hearing the news the Emperor arrived and the two swindlers helped him put on his clothes.

3

The gold and silver went straight into the swindlers's pockets and they pretended to work hard at the empty looms until late at night. The emperor sent his first minister to check because he wanted to learn if he would be able to see the fabrics. The citizens were also curious whether the first minister was stupid or not.

6

The whole town was talking about this splendid cloth and the Emperor wanted to see the cloth himself. Joined by a group of trusted men, he set out to see the two swindlers. When he arrived, the two swindlers were working on the empty looms. His men said they could see the elegant cloth, but he couldn't. He thought he was a fool himself.